Summary: Act IV, scene iii. The king speaks to a group of attendants, telling them of Polonius's death and his intention to send Hamlet to England. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern appear with Hamlet, who is under guard. Pressed by Claudius to reveal the location of Polonius's body, Hamlet is by turns inane, coy, and clever, saying that Polonius is being eaten by worms, and that the king ...

CURMUDGUCATION: Is Teaching An Art Or A Science? Well

2 days ago · If teaching can be reduced to an equation, it's an equation in which most of the variables change every single day. Yet teachers do work scientifically. Every lesson involves hypothesizing (this should help the concept make sense), testing (let's see how they react), and revising (bloody hell--I need to take those sentences off the worksheet).
